

2005 BEESON RANCH ZINFANDEL

Dan Berger's Vintage Experiences - "EXCEPTIONAL"

March 6, 2008

A companion wine from Beeson Ranch is a bit fatter and less crisp (than the Somers Ranch), better with cheeses after dinner.

Connoisseurs' Guide to California Wine - "90 POINTS – ONE PUFF"

May 2007

From its lightly dusty, mildly briary, berryish aromas to its exceptionally well-focused flavors of berries, sweet oak and subtle spice, this successful wine takes direction from its very precise varietal fruit and makes no undue concession to runaway ripeness. It is a solid, carefully balanced offering that is every inch a Zin meant for the table, and it serves as a welcome reminder that, when handled right, the varietal is a fine foil for a wide range of foods.

Wine Enthusiast - "89 POINTS"

December 15, 2006

Here's a well-behaved young zin, dry and fruity, with firm tannins and acids that will cut through barbecue. The cherry, blackberry, cola and peppery pomegranate flavors will play beautifully against a rich, savory barbecue sauce.

Pepper and blackberry and a load of violet fruit. Not for aging, but a mouthful of fruit for serving with roasted meats. Only 8 cases of this stylish red wine remain.
